

Virginia goes in and sees the ghost. He is crying.

- Don't cry, Mr Ghost! - says Virginia. - I will help you if I can.

- I was a wicked man and I can't have peace. I would like to die and rest forever in the little cemetery behind the castle - says the ghost.

Then he adds: - A prophecy says that God will forgive me if a good person prays for the salvation of my soul.

- I will pray for you - says Virginia. While she is praying, the ghost feels a great peace in his heart. He closes his eyes and dies.

- Now he can rest in peace - says Virginia, then she goes downstairs to call her family. They decide to bury the ghost in the little cemetery.

A few days later there is the ceremony.

Lord Canterville and the people from the village are there.

They bury the ghost under an old almond tree and it blossoms. The white flowers fall on the grave like snowflakes.

- Rest in peace, dear ghost - says Virginia, leaving the cemetery.

The twins are very sad.

- This place will never be the same without the ghost. Who will we shoot with our peashooters?

